Candidates all ready to meet in Minden

Last Wednesday's all-candidates meeting was the first of a series of events across the Victoria-Haliburton riding.

In conjunction with the Haliburton District Real Estate Board The Times will welcome candidates and voters to Minden on October 1. The location will probably be at Hyland Crest starting at 7:30 p.m.

Everyone is encouraged to attend. Don't vote for a party by habit. Find out what they have to offer this area and this country.

Candidates duck the issues in first meeting

by Andy Holloway

About 175 people showed their concern for condition Canada is in by showing up at the first all-candidates meeting in Haliburton last Wednesday.

But while several people took the opportunity to question the candidates about their policies, the questions were not very difficult and as such the potential MPs got away with quoting party platforms, or in the case of Independent Dennis Drainville whatever he felt like at the time.

Drainville's candor seemed to be what the audience was looking for as he and Reformer Barry Devolin seemed to be the big winners. Devolin could have expected to do well considering he was on home turf, but Drainville's performance surprised many and he was given more than a fair amount of applause.

On the losing side were the candidates from the two major parties. Liberal John O'Reilly suffered because of a horrible sound system while Conservative Lorne Chester was actually booed because of his support of free trade and NAFTA. Chester said trade with the United States has actually increased 33 per cent and that NAFTA was a window of opportunity. While saying anyone who was against free trade was an "isolationist and protectionist" he was booed by many. Others repeated the words "You're lying" over and over.

O'Reilly, on the other hand, attacked free trade as being one of the major hurdles facing the Canadian economy, the others being the GST and the Tory obsession with reducing the deficit, something they have not been able to do in their nine years of office. Haliburton's unemployment rate of over 30 per cent is too high and the effects of fighting the deficit are disastrous, O'Reilly said.

"They spend a lot of the time fighting the deficit which is in my mind just money we owe ourselves," said O'Reilly, who added job creation is the Liberal's number one priority.

The National Party candidate Martin Doyle earned a long applause with his recreation of the movie Jaws as a metaphor for the plight Canada is in now.

"The hero is the National Party who will make it safe for Canadian businesses to swim in Canada's waters. With the National Party of Canada we'll make it safe for you to buy your kids lunch, not be lunch," said Doyle who stumbled on some other issues.

NDPer Cathy Vainio chose the same theme, but focussed on job creation as the way to get Canada back on track. Vainio said the NDP would "clean up the mess and begin the task of economic recovery" if elected. Her message did not get through very clearly, owing to the fact she was sharing the same faulty microphone as O'Reilly, but the people heard her when she said she would not be silenced by party discipline.

"Quite frankly I felt perturbed that I would be muzzled. I don't think so," Vainio said convincingly.

Party discipline was one of the key issues on which Drainville, a victim of such discipline himself while in the provincial NDP government, focussed. "They will be muzzled. They will be told how to vote and they will have to vote that way or else they will end up as I did."

Saying an independent MP can be effective in parliament, Drainville sent a message that he would not be a pushover in the campaign.

However, the other big winner was Devolin whose message about deficit cutting was similar to Chester's, but more warmly received. He said the Reform Party could eliminate the deficit in three years without raising taxes. "Every year the government spends $160 million and raises $125 million. The problem is a spending problem not a tax problem."

Stouffer school is on target

School board should be able to start moving in by October

by Andy Holloway

Construction at Archie Stouffer Elementary School is still on schedule and the school board expects it will be able to move in to some areas around the end of the month.

The contractors and subcontractors are "optimistic and growing more optimistic" that the board will get possession of the school by October, said business administrator Jim Bradley.

The board will move into the school in stages, with custodial staff being the first to move. Towards the end of the first week some classrooms will be turned over which will allow the furniture to be moved.

Last week workers were waiting for windows to complete the classrooms' exterior. The rooms are painted, floor tiles are down and the ceiling is near completion.

Many students will be housed in the portables at the rear of the school until all of the construction work is finished, which is still estimated to be by the end of December. Kindergarten and grade one students will continue to use the IGA Annex building, but the rest of the students should be moved to the site by mid-October. The new library is expected to be finished by the beginning of November.

The board does gain a few rooms as a result of the construction. Bradley said the board gains the four-plex and two special education rooms while losing the old computer lab room, the room next to that and the staff room.

Bradley said on Tuesday that the contractors have been very complimentary to the community because of the lack of vandalism. The only problem that has occurred so far has been that a cement mixer was borrowed for a while. It was returned without any damage, although considerably dirtier. However, that very night a pavement cutter was stolen from the construction site. The theft is being investigated by Minden OPP.

Shelved report shredded by heads

by Russ Duhaime

What started out as a plan to ease the county tax burden is gradually turning into an expensive shelf ornament.

Haliburton County Council's attempt to improve management efficiency by bringing in a consultant has added $40,000 to the budget and a multitude of recommendations that are being shunned by council.

The so-called Wace Report, already killed by county council, is now being kicked about by department heads. Reports from four county department heads predictably refute many of the comments made in the report.

Before Wace and Associates began its review of the county's management system, Chief Administrative Officer Gary McKnight was predicting that no savings would be found. McKnight, who is now working as the administrator of Hyland Crest says the proof is in the pudding.

"I am not surprised that (Steven) Wace was unable to find any appreciable savings because I firmly believe that each department was being operated in an efficient manner," McKnight said in his report to council. "I am sure council will now have a greater appreciation of their staff and their ability to operate their respective departments."

In fact, Wace said in his report that the county can save about $250,000 a year by upgrading computer systems, streamlining operations and re-

Dysart noise bylaw stays the same

by Andy Holloway

All of Dysart councillors agree Nancy Prentice has a valid complaint regarding the continual barking by her neighbor's dogs, but some don't want to take it to court.

Prentice was before council for the third time in three months to try to resolve the noise problem around her Eagle Lake home. Each time council has promised to look into toughening its bylaw, but each time nothing is done.

Deputy reeve Curry Bishop said he drove by the area a few weeks earlier and that the noise was excessive. However, Bishop said he felt the current bylaw was tough enough and that neither the proposed new one or the old one would have much chance in court.

Councillors Lloyd Leadbeatler and Brian Watts disagreed saying the proposed changes would put some teeth into the bylaw and should help Prentice.

"If we went to court with the new bylaw you would have a better chance of winning because it's more specific," said Leadbeatler.

A proposed bylaw presented by the municipal clerk specifically states that excessive barking or whimpering is grounds enough for a charge to be laid. Neither of the two bylaws has been tested in court.

Council decided not to implement the proposed bylaw. Instead, it will meet with the owners to try to resolve the conflict out of court. If this does not solve the problem, council might take the owners to court.

Prentice said she would take it to court, but that it would cost $1,800 to take on all three of the owners - too rich for her blood.

Federal Election '93

Parties had better believe Drainville is back

by Russ Duhaime

Candidates who doubted Dennis Drainville's importance in this federal campaign should be revising their tactics after last Wednesday's performance in Haliburton.

The Independent candidate had all guns firing for this first all-candidates meeting. His voice was clear and loud, his words consistently struck a nerve with the large audience, and he had the good microphone. He wasn't ushered out on the crowd's shoulders, but he was impressive.

There was really no question that Drainville would do well; he is by far the best orator in this strong six-candidate field. The question was how poorly the others would appear in contrast. For the most part, they held their own.

In terms of content, this was a low-key affair. Comments and responses were surprisingly predictable considering the closeness of the race. Party platform (for those with a party) formed the basis of most of the evening's exchange.

What they had to say was a yawn, but it was interesting to see how they said it. For the most part, this is where the candidates gained or lost ground.

In a nutshell, this is what we saw:

Liberal candidate John O'Reilly was almost invisible at the far left of the head table. The microphone he shared was plagued with squealing feedback and distortion that made the candidate sound like a Muppet. It's fair to say O'Reilly didn't gain much in this setting, but neither did he lose. No damage was done in this awkward first outing.

National candidate Martin Doyle is virtually unknown in this riding and, therefore, had nothing to lose. His rich, actor's voice helped overcome the lousy microphone and he succeeded in conveying the party's message — which is really all he can hope to achieve in this election. His titillating "Jaws" story was a refreshing interlude in an otherwise uneventful night. He's making the most of this soapbox.

New Democrat Cathy Vainio had the worst go with the mike. Her opening comments were drowned out by the hair-raising squeal of an inadequate sound system. Her feisty response to questions was well received, but these off-the-cuff replies occasionally found her grappling with secondary questions from the floor. It was a rough start, but there were also a few inspiring moments.

Conservative candidate Lorne Chester didn't have the bad mike to fight with, but his supporters probably wished he had. His voice rang out crisp and clear and he made his way through the rehearsed portion of the show without a hitch. However, his first candid response thus far in the campaign was met with a chorus of boos from the floor. The topic, of course, was free trade, which is a bear's trap waiting to snap shut on the leg of any candidate game enough to step in. Ouch! The candidate was keeping notes of his opponents' comments, presumable for use at the next event.

Drainville didn't even break a sweat. His three years in opposition at Queen's Park have polished his already effective debating skills. His effortless style was inspiring. We should expect a more direct attack from his opponents at future forums.

Reform candidate Barry Devolin was second best in this showing. With the help of the good mike, he was able to pitch his, and his party's, message. He appeared comfortable on this home-town stage and he fielded questions better than most. This was a good start, but not overwhelming.

Wednesday was the first of at least four forums in this election. It was organized by the Haliburton County Real Estate Board and hosted by the Haliburton Echo.

About 175 turned out to the Dysart Community Centre to meet the candidates. The large turnout demonstrates the level of interest. The lack of buttons and banners illustrates that most came with open minds.

The other side of the coin

In stark contrast to Prime Minister Kim Campbell's visit to Lindsay last week, Liberal Deputy Leader Sheila Copps (centre) visited Abex Industries, a firm which closed during the PC years in power. Copps said the Free Trade Agreement favours the Americans and is an "extremely flawed deal." She did not go as far as to say the Liberals would cancel the deal. Liberal candidate John O'Reilly also denounced free trade and the GST.

Federal Election '93

Each week The Times will ask each of the candidates to respond to a question. This week's question is: In light of the type of low-key representation this riding has had for the past 27 years, how will you represent the riding.

John O'Reilly, Liberal

I want to be an active member in the House of Commons and in the Legislative Committees in Ottawa. A person can be active as a back bench, but I would like to try to be a Parliamentary Secretary. A great deal of work is done at the committee stage in Parliament. By participating with committees studying and changing legislation, an MP is not only aware of what is taking place but also develops a great sense of purpose.

I would be most interested to work on committees involving the economy and development of business in our country because that work helps Canadians to have jobs.

By attending functions regularly in the riding and meeting constituents both at the constituency office and at meetings, I would have the benefit of hearing their opinions and using their advice when doing the job of being an MP.

Dennis Drainville, Independent

There are two sides to the "representation" coin - keeping in touch here and speaking out in Ottawa.

To help overcome the vast geography of this riding I would assist in creating an assembly of volunteers who will be elected as a non-party bridge between myself and my constituents. Victoria-Haliburton supporters of this idea call it an "Assembly of Electors."

In Ottawa I would use every means of communication available, from formal speeches on the floor of the House, to questions in Question Period, presentations to committees, statements to the media, and, if necessary, a soapbox on Parliament Hill.

Martin Doyle, National Party

As an MP for Victoria-Haliburton, I would be committed to meet with a "constituent assembly" appointed or elected by the community and open to observation by the public. I would meet with this group every 4 to 6 weeks to review matters of local, regional and national importance. It would establish the area's consensual positions on each of these matters.

I would be dedicated to ensuring that these positions become action items for the government. Reporting back to the assembly in subsequent meetings, I would review the level of success achieved in getting the needs of the riding before the appropriate committees or to the floor of the House of Commons. I am a firm believer in confrontation. Make no mistake. You have to fight for your place in Ottawa. I know how to fight with dignity.

Lorne Chester, PC

As the MP my energy will be directed toward positive change in this country - change that will have a beneficial effect for Victoria-Haliburton.

As soon as elected, I will open a permanent riding office that will give residents continual access to me.

I intend to establish a Constituent Communication Network to further keep me in touch with residents. I will hold six annual "town-hall" type meetings per year at various locations in the riding. These meetings will be an open forum, and they will allow us, working together, to address the issues of greatest concern to the constituents.

In Ottawa, I intend to be an aggressive, positive force for change. I believe in, and enjoy, hard work.

Cathy Vainio, NDP

My understanding of "low-key" in political terms is that an MP contributes and participates on a minimal basis. I don't think this is the time for low-key representation given the issues confronting Victoria-Haliburton and this nation.

If a representative is doing his/her job, two guiding principles have to be at work. First, there has to be attention paid to the special needs and interests of individual constituents. Second, these particular interests have to be weighed against the general or public interest - the common good. Where there is coherence the MP's job is facilitated. In the event that there is incompatibility then, I believe, the public interest takes precedence.

A worst case scenario is when a matter, for example the GST, has not met the individual's interests and is not in the general public's interests, but is proposed by the MP's party. Then, I think, the MP should strenuously oppose the measure.

Barry Devolin, Reform Party

I believe that the primary responsibility of an MP is to represent his/her constituents in Ottawa. As your Reform MP, that is my intention. Unlike the three traditional parties, Reformers do not believe in strict party discipline. MPs in the Conservative, Liberal and NDP parties must vote their party line. Reform MPs, however, are pledged to represent their constituents.

For example, if a majority of you support a piece of legislation, I will vote for it. In fact, I'll vote for it even if it goes against the views of my party, the wishes of my leader or even my opinion. This idea of true representation is central to the Reform Party platform.

The job of an MP is to connect constituents with the political decision-making process in Ottawa. A party which allows free votes is absolutely necessary to meet this goal.

Toronto actor wins National Party nod

by Andy Holloway

Is Victoria-Haliburton ready to accept an actor living in Toronto with no real ties to the area as a serious federal candidate? The National Party and Martin Doyle will soon find out.

Doyle was nominated to stand for the party in this riding last Monday night in Fenelon Falls at a meeting attended by about 25 people. Doyle defeated his only rival, Omamee resident Marvin Rabjohn.

The Toronto resident, though, does not believe people will mind that he does not live in the riding and may not move here even if elected.

"If I do or I don't the technology of faxes and such will help and it is only one-and-a-half hours away. There are also people in the association who have contacts who know what is going on in this riding," says Doyle.

Riding president Gloria Welsh agrees and says the problems that face Victoria-Haliburton are much the same as other places in Canada. Welsh says the riding association, which formed in late July, was in a position where they needed to look outside the riding to get their point of view across to the electorate.

The Toronto-area had a number of potential candidates, many in the same riding, so it was decided to spread the wealth of grass-roots candidates around, says Doyle. "There were a number of ridings I was directed to, but after talking to (Welsh) I decided that this was the riding I wanted to be in."

Doyle says he does have some connection to the area even if it is stretching the point. His family has a cottage in the Midland-Penetang area and he has friends in Cannington.

As their name would suggest, the National Party believes that Canada's institutions should be put back into the hands of Canadians. Doyle says that this area must demand its equal share of federal money, but that much of the success of this area depends on people having more disposable income.

"There is very little that can be done here in isolation. The money has to be demanded to maintain the area's infrastructure and we have to arrest the foreign influence that Canada is experiencing."

You can't do anything outside the system, you can only do things within the system."

Federal Election '93

Martin Doyle, National Party

A performer in the advertising, film and television industries living in Toronto, Martin Doyle is a newcomer to federal politics. He is a National Guild councillor of the Performers Guild of ACTRA which represents the concerns of 10,000 actors, writers and broadcast journalists across Canada, a Toronto Performers Branch Councillor, Chair of the Commercial Committee and Chair of the Wages and Working Conditions Committee. In the past 20 years he has lived and worked in all but two of Canada's provinces, lived in New York and Los Angeles from 1982 to 1988, and spent three weeks on assignment in Mexico City after the massive earthquake of 1985. He might relocate to this riding if appropriate.

Issues:

Control and management of the Canadian economy - particularly getting Canadian banks in gear. Wants the banking industry to focus more on Canadian businesses and to pay less attention to acquiring foreign assets. Once the system is controlled Doyle believes jobs will flow from there. Other concerns like universal medicare, social safety networks and education must also be examined to eliminate waste without hurting the people who depend on them. For example he cites the recent vice-presidential report in the United States as having found $108 billion worth of redundancies which, allowing for our lower population and higher bureaucracy, translates into more than $11 billion worth of savings in Canada. He would cancel free trade and NAFTA, but not erect barriers to trade. He likes agreements like the old Auto Pact which he says worked very well.

What the candidate says:

I saw a bumper sticker recently that said, "My Canada excludes politicians".

Why is it that Canadians are so cynical about their politicians?

The Forum House Dictionary of Synonyms and Antonyms answers the question when it makes this clear distinction: A Politician "suggests the schemes and devices of a person who engages in politics for party ends and his/her own advantage."

A Statesman "suggests the eminent ability, foresight, and unselfish devotion to the interest of his/her country of a person dealing with the important affairs" of government.

In 1993, elect a statesman from the National Party of Canada. Canada has enough politicians.

Outlook:

As it is less than a year old, the National Party knows it will not win the election and probably not any seats, however it does wish to get its platform off the ground. Doyle's personality and speaking voice alone should sway some voters, but are people ready to support someone who doesn't have any ties to the community? Finishing higher than sixth place would be a large victory.

Election Day is on its way!

THE RULES FOR THIS ELECTION ARE BASED ON THE RECENTLY AMENDED CANADA ELECTIONS ACT.

Will the new Elections Act affect how you exercise your right to vote?

Yes, to some extent, because the new measures will provide eligible voters with more ways to exercise their right to vote. For example, it is now possible to vote by "Special Ballot" and revision of the voters list has been extended to give more voters the opportunity to be registered.

The Special Ballot: a new way to have your say

By allowing you to vote in advance either by mail or in person, the Special Ballot addresses voter concerns related to conflicting schedules, distance or mobility.

- If you expect that you will be unable to vote on Election Day, October 25 or at the Advance Polls, October 16, 18 and 19, you can vote by Special Ballot as of now. For more information, contact the Elections Canada office in your riding.
- Voters away from their riding can pick up the registration form entitled "Voting by Canadians away from their ridings", available at all Canada Post Corporation outlets MAIL & POSTE.
- As for voters who are temporarily outside Canada, and Canadians who have been residing abroad for less than five years, you can play a part in helping them to exercise their right to vote. Just tell them to pick up the above registration form at any Canadian diplomatic mission abroad. Or if possible, send them one by fax. The forms can be found at all Canada Post Corporation outlets.

An election with a difference: no enumeration*

The voters list, compiled by Elections Canada during the enumeration for the October 1992 referendum, will be used again for this federal election. In order to update this list, the majority of Canadians will receive, within the coming weeks, a Federal Voters List Revision Card, as illustrated. This card confirms that your name is on the list and tells you where and when you can vote. A leaflet from Elections Canada will arrive shortly afterwards explaining what to do in order to correct any errors or omissions on this card.

* Except in Quebec, as the one held there last October was conducted under provincial legislation.

A reminder to all eligible voters

To exercise your right to vote, you must be a Canadian citizen, at least 18 years of age on Election Day and your name must appear on the voters list.

Some important dates to remember

End of revision of the voters list: October 20 • Advance Polls: October 16, 18 and 19 • Election Day: October 25

- Notice to all cable subscribers: Elections Canada voter information is broadcast daily on the Parliamentary Channel.

Editorial

Candidates have easy time of it

Our federal candidates got off a bit too easy when they climbed up onto the stage for last Wednesday's forum in Haliburton village.

They walked in, sat down, read their lines and routinely fielded a few questions with textbook answers. It was all so polite.

It doesn't make sense. For years people in this county have been stewing about the way this country is run. Yet now that our candidates are listening most people clam up.

We have an unemployment rate here of almost 30 per cent. Thirty per cent — almost one out of every three of our neighbours is out of work.

We've seen our post offices closed with no intervention from our elected member. We have a federally-managed waterway that favours our down-stream neighbours. We have unpopular taxes and unpopular trade policies dictated to us at our peril.

Our province, once the industrial heartland of this nation, is being battered by federal policies. We have a desperate provincial government clambering to make ends meet in light of severe federal cut-backs. In turn, our municipal governments and school boards are gasping for air. Provincial and municipal staffing cuts are on their way, which can only mean deflated service and inflated unemployment.

The person we elect 35 days from now will not single-handedly change all that. However, he or she can make a difference by paying attention to our concerns and fighting tooth and nail to make sure they are heard.

Now is the time to demand the representation we need. Now is when we must discover who is capable and willing to fight for change.

Wednesday's forum was the first of two to be held in this county. We get another kick at the cat on October 1 when the candidates come to the Hyland Crest auditorium in Minden. Let's take the opportunity to force the candidates to show their true colours, to scrap the rhetoric and demonstrate the style of leadership they can offer.

One vote against Drainville

Editor's note: The following is an open letter to Dennis Drainville:

A few years back you were a Liberal candidate running in a federal election with a personal mandate to change the world. Later with the same conviction you became a man of the cloth with the title of Reverend. Next we meet you on the road to Temagami as a native rights activist. This time your convictions lead to an actual conviction and you spent time in jail. That seemed to be the end of your native rights phase.

Then we meet you again on your road to Damascus (your phrase) now carrying the banner of the New Democratic Party. Once again your conviction will change the world. Well, well, you did not get your own way so you picked up your marbles and left the game.

In your brief incarnation as an independent MPP you claimed to have as much a voice as a government member. As you only lasted a few months it's difficult to know if that would have been the case. And now you are back at it again, born again with yet another new dream. You claim that your message must be heard in Ottawa! Also, you may hold a balance of power in a minority government.

Way to go Dennis! Don't ever stop making politics a source of entertainment. We sure need all the jokes we can get in a community of 20 to 30 per cent unemployment.

By the way, after doing half a job and serving half a term as MPP you are eligible for a sizeable severance package, six months at full pay. Without going into exact numbers, it is enough to say the amount is more than what the average unemployed family is living on for a full year. But knowing your high moral standards I would expect you to return that money to the taxpayers of Ontario. To leave Victoria-Haliburton without provincial representation and to force an expensive bi-election is, of course, unimportant compared to your lofty goals, but I am sure your principles would not allow you to accept taxpayer's money for abandoning your position.

Ernie Percy

P.S. You can fool some of the people all of the time and all of the people some of the time. But you can't fool all of the people all of the time, and you can't fool me anymore.

One letter supporting former riding MPP

Editor:

May I compliment you for an excellent election editorial, "A Time for Leadership" (Sept. 7)?

There is an obsession with leadership as being something that must come down from on high. Your demand that it be a quality inherent in our local MP was most refreshing. Your final statement was particularly appropriate: "We do not want a puppet whose strings are controlled from the front benches of Parliament."

May I chide you gently for an inaccuracy in the interesting profiles of the Victoria-Haliburton candidates in your September 13 issue? Dennis Drainville is not a Baptist Minister, but an Anglican Minister. But don't lose sleep over that error. He is very ecumenically minded!

In the same issue, The Harpoon column went a bit further astray is quoting Paul Pagnuelo (a staunch Reform Party supporter using the Ontario Taxpayers Federation as a podium). In the Federation column which Harpoon quoted, Pagnuelo claims that "Drainville's decision to walk out with a golden handshake worth $22,337 paid for by our hard earned tax dollars shatters that trust."

The fact is that in a letter to the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly (dated August 31), Drainville said "...if I am elected to the House of Commons, it is my intention to remit back to the Legislative Assembly my severance pay."

So if he wins he loses his severance pay. If he loses, he's also lost it by putting his money behind his beliefs. I'd say our trust is in good hands.

We have the two sides represented on former MPP Dennis Drainville, but what about the rest of the field? Drop us a line and let us, and the candidates, know how you feel.

Moosing around

Art's beauty only to the beholder's eye

Art is making something out of nothing and selling it.

Frank Zappa

Maybe Crazy Frank is right. Perhaps that's all there is to Art. Philosophers, poets and sundry windbags have been trying to define Art in essays, treatises, dissertations and critiques for centuries. Along comes a twentieth century pop musician who sums it up in 10 words.

It's a perplexing question. If I had to define Art as it exists today, I'd have to say Art is what the experts say it is. Would anyone have looked twice at the Mondrian print or a Warhol painting if they hadn't earned approving nods from big name critics? Same thing with music.

When I hear Rhapsody in Blue by George Gershwin it makes my heart soar. When I hear Die Gluckliche Hande by Schonberg, it makes my head ache.

Yet the experts sing the praises of Schonberg and dismiss Gershwin with a patronizing pat on the head as an amusing diversion.

I don't get it.

I also don't get why a divine phenomenon like Ella Fitzgerald is written off as a mere "jazz vocalist" while an Opera diva, screeching in unintelligible Italian, is revered as a musical genius.

Then of course there's painting. The Art

Black 'n White

by Arthur Black

Gallery in Ottawa recently took it in the shorts for lashing out over a million loonies to buy an American painting entitled Rothko No. 16. Also known as Two Whites, Two Reds.

Which is all we got for our money: a largely empty canvas daubed with white and red. It looks like a close-up of two truck fenders doing a courtship dance.

But that's okay — because it was a bargain. Other paintings by Rothko have sold for much more.

Who can forget White, Yellow, Red on Yellow which fetched nearly $2 million U.S. last year? Or the immortal Black and Dark Red on Red ($2.3 million U.S.)?

And of course Rothko's best (ie. most profitable) number — the justly famous Black Area in Reds? An Art Gallery in California laid out $3.6 million for that little number two years ago.

You think I'm making this all up don't you? Sorry chum, it's all true.

Which gives you some idea of how far gone the Art Biz is.

But things just may be turning around. We may have reached the apex of Art Looniness.

I note with approval that Harvard University has announced its investment plans for next year. They include a $10 million endowment for something called The House of Blues.

The House of Blues is a blues club based in Cambridge, Massachusetts, but with plans to expand across the continent, possibly with clubs in Montreal, Toronto and Vancouver.

Think about it for a moment. Harvard University — one of the straightest-laced, upper-crustiest Ivy League institutions this side of the Vatican, is buying into a blues club.

Our own Marshall McLuhan once wrote: "I think of Art... as a DEW line, a Distant Early Warning System that can always be relied on to tell the old culture what is beginning to happen to it."

Another thinker, Robert Scull, wrote: "I think of Art as a great big river that just flows and it's been flowing for thousands of years... Art doesn't win wars, but it's the only thing that remains after the civilizations go. Nobody knows much about the politics of certain Egyptian dynasties, but people remember the Art, the great things that were created."

So I suppose thousands of years from now, no one will remember Terry Fox or Wayne Gretsky or Margaret Atwood, or perhaps even Canada.

They'll just remember Rothko No. 16, Two Whites, Two Reds.

Frightening thought, eh wot?

Federal Election '93

Muffled sound turns hopefuls into Muppets

Quite a few people remarked after last Wednesday's all-candidates meeting that the three on the right side of the stage sounded like Muppets because of the poor sound system. Liberal O'Reilly sounded like Kermit the Frog while NDPer Vainio reminded us of Miss Piggy, not surprising when you consider the behind-the-scenes affection their two respective parties share. National Party candidate Doyle, however, sounded like Fozzy Bear, the earnest performer who never gets a chance.

Do or die

A reader in Kinmount has the following suggestion: Whenever politicians make a promise they must spell out the date by which it will be accomplished, if they do not make good they are forced to quit. This, he says, will "bring a little reality and honesty back in politics." Why not take it a step further and require that they donate all of their world belongings to charity. Hey, we're not the ones making outlandish promises like removing the deficit in five years.

Big babies

Early last week Liberal leader Jean Chretien and

The Harpoon

Prime Minister Kim Campbell had a slight disagreement. Campbell called the Liberal job plan ridiculous to start the verbal sparring. Chretien then said Campbell was "stupid". Stay tuned, this week it's expected Campbell will say, "Oh yeah, well my mother could have taken your mother." Chretien will then reply, "Your mother and whose army?" and Campbell will say, "My mother and $5.8 billion worth of useless helicopters."

Foot Shots

NDP and Reform leaders had a different take on the election as well. Preston Manning said the NDP had already thrown in the election towel by stating it might support a Liberal government to keep the Tories out. However, Reform Party campaign manager then said the party might support a Tory minority government. Manning did not say whether his party had thrown in the towel as well.

Bloc Head

Bloc Quebecois leader Lucien Bouchard received a grilling this week at a bar and on television. In a television interview with CBC Bouchard was struck dumb as interviewer Don Newman pointed out that Quebec gets 31 per cent of federal transfer payments, by far the most of any region in Canada. Unsure of his facts Bouchard stumbled and repeated his assertion that Quebec loses, federally speaking. Earlier he was told by patrons of a bar in Hull, Quebec to get out of town. It seems not everyone in Quebec is taken with the Bloc head.

22,337 reasons

Need a reason to vote for Independent Dennis Drainville? Well, here are 22,337 of them. That number represents his severance pay from Ontario. If he wins he promises to pay it back, if he doesn't win we can kiss that money au revoir.

Just The Fax

If the election was decided by fax paper the Liberals would handily win this riding. The local Grits sent 27 sheets (halves count as one) of paper through our system to win the fax wars for the second week in a row. Although the Reform Party put up a fight early in the week it faded in the end and recorded just 10 sheets by week's end. The PCs and National Party were tied with five each and the NDP and Dennis Drainville had but one. Harpoon feels the Liberals should buy us a new roll of fax paper after the election.

Doyle regales crowd with Canadian version of Jaws

While all the candidates said jobs were an important campaign issue, National Partier Martin Doyle had the most innovative oration - using the movie Jaws as a metaphor for Canada's economic condition.

In Doyle's version of Jaws, the tourist town of Amity is Canada, the ocean is the economy and it's not safe to swim in the water because of the great white shark "Transnational Corp." which Doyle says has the following qualities: a brain the size of a pea, it craps and it makes babies. The Mayor of Amity is the politicians (read PCs) who say everything is just fine and not to worry, while the hero, played by Richard Dreyfus in the movie, is the National Party who make it safe for "Canadian businesses to swim in Canadian waters." Doyle had the audience confused for a while, but received a good-sized ovation for his narration.

Just when you thought it was safe in the water: Duuuuh-nneeeent, Duuuuh-nneeeent, duhnunduhnunduhnund.

Pat promises to centralize government

The Times' election coverage team caught up with candidate Pat last Wednesday outside the Dysart Community Centre where he was listening in on the voices of his opponents who participated in a candidates forum.

When asked why he wasn't involved in the event, he said he is following in the footsteps of the riding's former Member of Parliament. "Sometimes it's better to say nothing," he said. Just then a chorus of boos could be heard from the crowded hall above the arena, proving his point.

Pat, however, did agree to answer a few of our questions, and this is what he said.

Times: Canada's annual budget deficit is more than $35 billion. What would you have the government do about this staggering problem?

Pat: Well, my books are in a mess right now. I'll let you know after I'm elected.

Times: Some say our free trade agreement with the United States has damaged the Canadian economy. Mexico is now being invited into the agreement. What sort of trade policy would you support as our MP?

Pat: Well, my books are in a mess. I'll let you know after the election.

Times: What about jobs? What would you do to ease the 30 per cent unemployment rate in Haliburton County?

Pat: Well, my books...

Times: ...are in a mess. Right. Well is there anything you can comment on before the election?

Pat: Of course there is! What are you insinuating? Are you suggesting that I'm trying to duck the issues? I'll have you know I've drafted specific policies to deal with all our problems. For example, I'm ready to act immediately on the shark problem we're having in our lakes.

Times: Sharks?

Pat: That's right. The short guy sitting between Kermit and Miss Piggy said we have to do something about the sharks and I'm telling you I'm the best bait.

Times: Um, Okay. Well, what about representation? The other candidates are promising they'll carry our concerns to Ottawa.

Pat: I won't need to carry anything to Ottawa. I plan to bring Ottawa to Harcourt. You see we've got this great building with an elevator and everything. It would be perfect for parliament. Besides, I read somewhere that the population centre of Canada is Laxton, Digby and Longford Townships. Norland would be the ideal place for parliament, but they don't have a building with an elevator, so Cardiff's the next best bet.

Sports

Field hockey

High school field hockey begins this Tuesday in Haliburton with the junior and senior girls taking on Lakefield College in doubleheader action.

It's football time again

While other schools in the Kawartha complain about not having enough students who want to play football, Haliburton Highlands Secondary School has an over abundance.

Owing partly to high school spirit and the good reputation the football teams have had for the past several years there have always been more than enough students wishing to put their bodies in line for a few hard knocks.

At other Kawartha schools certain athletic teams seem to be in decline. The big reason for this is the introduction of rugby. Rugby is just as rough as football, perhaps more so, and there is less equipment used which helps out cash-strapped schools.

Last spring the effects of strong Kawartha rugby programs was shown in the decline of track and field performers from several schools including LCVI.

However, neither track or football has suffered at Haliburton. If there's one thing everyone likes to be it's a winner and the Redmen football team has done that fairly consistently. Last year, both the junior and senior Redmen teams went to the Kawartha finals.

Football is back in town: The high school football teams were in full flight last week gearing up for their game this Friday against the Falcons in Fenelon Falls. Both the senior and junior teams will be in action this Friday and next when they play their first home game of the Kawartha West regular season. The seniors in some ball-handling drills (above) while the juniors were put through some tackling drills (left).

Highland Games moves to Glebe Park

by Andy Holloway

The Highland Games were such a success at Head Lake Park that they are being moved there permanently.

The annual games were traditionally held at Glebe Park, but this year they were moved because new grass was being put in at Glebe Park.

Despite the late switch, it worked with the games recording an attendance increase of about 300 people, the first time in several years the games had attracted more people than the year before said games organizer Jane Rosenburg.

Dysart councillor Brian Watts said the move to Head Lake should be permanent because "there is the tendency to get walk-in trade that you wouldn't otherwise get."

The close proximity of the games to downtown Haliburton allowed people who did not know about the games to come and check them out. The move is also a boost for downtown businesses who benefit as more people are in the immediate area.

The games will be presented next year for the sixth time.

Nordic ski trails to expand

by Andy Holloway

The Nordic Ski Association wants to expand the trail system at Glebe Park in Haliburton.

Association president John Teljeur said the improvements are needed if the county is going to be able to hold events like the high school cross-country skiing championships again. The association, along with the high school, hosted the event last winter and it was a big success bringing a lot of people into the area.

The trails in Glebe Park are important because they are the only ones the association has a lot of control over. Most of the ski trails in the county are on private property. Glebe Park is owned by Dysart township. Teljeur said the initial plans call for three to five kilometres of trails to be added to the five kilometres of trails already in the park. The association also wants to erect an equipment shed in the area. Dysart council agreed to both changes in principle, but withheld approval until the final plans are in.

Last year the association had 300 members and it estimates up to 6,000 skiers took advantage of the county's trails.

"We are far from where we want to be, but it's a start," said Teljeur.

Dysart council also gave the association two weeks use of a bulldozer free of charge. The association hopes to be able to install lights at Glebe Park. They were going to that last year, but ran out of funds.

Coaching awards nominees needed

The Times and 3M are sponsoring a coaching recognition program designed to spotlight the work of area coaches. Coaches can be from any sport and at any level, including school. Nomination forms can be obtained at The Times office during office hours.

HHOA caps busy year with year-end indoor seminar

by Jerry Grozelle

The Haliburton Highlands Outdoors Association capped a busy year with its first Annual Meeting on Sunday, September 12. A near-capacity crowd turned out at the Dysart Community Centre in Haliburton to view the displays, learn what the Association has been doing over the past 12 months and hear guest speaker Mike Buss talk about the importance of hunter ethics to the future of the sport.

After Association president Ted Vasey welcomed the assemblage and introduced the executive, vice-president Sid Cooper took the floor and gave a brief review of the HHOA's activities and accomplishments over the past year.

In its brief existence, the HHOA has an impressive record of achievements in the areas of conservation, education and making government agencies aware of the concerns of its members.

Two of the major political concerns addressed by the Association are Native hunting and fishing issues and proposed legislation that would have a serious negative impact on hunting with hounds.

On the conservation front, one project overshadows the rest by the sheer number of volunteers who moved a small mountain of rock, to improve a major spawning bed for lake trout on Kennesis Lake. About 45 volunteers helped to move 110 tons of rock by barge to a shoal on Kennesis Lake that has been identified by the Ministry of Natural Resources as the lake's major spawning area. The addition of the rock is expected to improve spawning success.

The HHOA's Fish Committee also stocked 4,500 rainbow trout into three local lakes, thereby increasing fishing opportunities for anglers in the future.

A late winter deer feeding project was conducted in co-operation with the MNR at the Hindon Deer Yard.

A system aimed at helping deer hunters find lost hounds has also been set up. Camps are registered and a number is issued. Hounds are identified by their camp number, making it much faster to retrieve strays from a central holding pen.

A number of educational seminars were conducted over the last 12 months and more are planned for the coming year. These educational seminars are open to members and non-members alike.

During the annual meeting's intermission, attendees had the opportunity to check out the displays, talk with Association directors and executives, watch a video of the fish spawning project on Kennesis Lake, view aerial photos of their hunting areas in 3D, sign up for the camp/dog registration, renew their membership or chat with guest speaker Mike Buss.

The last item on the annual meeting's agenda was the election of a board of directors for the coming year.

SPEAKER'S MESSAGE

In his speech on the importance of hunter ethics to the future of the sport, Mike Buss pointed out at the start that many of those in attendance wouldn't like what he had to say. He had some dire predictions about the future of hunting, unless hunters make it clear that they are not going to tolerate any bad antics from a few individuals that will reflect badly on the vast majority who abide by the laws.

"We must improve our image," he cautioned. "We must live by the highest standards and demand that everybody else do the same."

Buss is an avid outdoorsman, hunter and fisherman and he is also the Regional Wildlife Ecologist for the MNR's Algonquin Region, based in Huntsville.

People check out some of the many activities the HHOA accomplished outdoors this year.

He fears that the unethical conduct of a few people who consider themselves hunters are fuelling the fires of anti-hunting groups.

"The lunatic fringe is writing an epitaph for all of us," he warned.

The anti-hunting movement is getting stronger and hunters must do their utmost to promote safe, ethical practices that don't offend the non-hunting segment of society.

"When you are hunting, you're actively participating in nature," Buss explained. "You can't explain that to non-hunters or anti-hunters."

"Some of these hopelessly naive people think that if they don't do the killing, they are absolved," Buss said, referring to people who condemn hunting while buying their family's supply of meat pre-packaged at the grocery store. "They may have witnessed some asinine act that some hunter has committed, which may not have had anything to do with killing an animal, and base their opinions on that."

Buss cited "disregard for property owners' rights" as another problem that drives a wedge between hunters and non-hunters.

"We shouldn't tolerate trespassing in others," he said.

Buss pointed out that all the blood and guts on television has an effect on how people perceive everyone who owns a gun, hunters included. He also said that he isn't sure that the advance in technology is having a positive effect on hunting. He says he prefers the basics of predator, prey and environment.

"Gadgets shouldn't be the end rather than the means to the end," he said. "Success at all cost shouldn't be the goal."

Another concern that Buss voiced was that Non-native hunters are looked upon differently than natives.

"Hunting is just as much a part of my heritage as anyone else's," he said.

Buss points out that everyone shares in the decline in numbers of some animals. It's not just the hunters who may have exploited them in the past. He illustrated that observation with the following example: "The wheat that made the pasta we eat was grown on prairie wheat fields that used to be bison range. It isn't bison range any more."

Buss suggested that hunters could go a long way towards helping to shape wildlife policies and hunting regulations by keeping better track of their activities and forming advisory committees to work with the wildlife managers and policy makers. By keeping personal hunting diaries or having one member of an organized hunting camp designated to keep track of such things as deer sightings, numbers harvested and number of people hunting, it would enable biologists to better understand the population characteristics and more accurately assess the actual harvest in areas as small as a single wildlife management unit.

"We need to take the initiative and show the responsibility to help with wildlife management," he said. "We have to show an interest beyond the week of deer hunting."

Barrie Youth ends modest two game win streak by Haliburton

Haliburton Westside Jug City was back in action last week after a Labour Day weekend break, but came up short against Barrie Youth losing 2-0.

The loss snapped a modest two game win streak by Haliburton who had scored eight goals in those two games before being shut out by the Youth.

Coupled with an Orillia win the loss put Haliburton in ninth place with just one game remaining, that one was played at the Haliburton high school on Sunday (results will be published next week).

Haliburton need a win in its final game to have any kind of shot of grabbing a good playoff spot. They also need help from the three teams within striking distance. At least one of them must lose their final game(s) for Haliburton to pull out something higher than ninth spot.

In the game against Barrie, Kevin Carre and Rich Bailey scored to give the Youth a win. The win moved them into a tie for third with Bracebridge.

Huntsville Strikers made up four of their postponed games winning three and tying one to move back into first place by two points over the Collingwood Lakers.

The Minden Slow Pitch League ended its long summer schedule with a big year-end tourney last Saturday at the Minden diamonds.

The 12 teams were all guaranteed two games, and the promise of better things to come afterwards. The season started back on May 26 and fortunately there was only one rained out Wednesday night during the year which must be a record of sorts.

Finding shelter from the storm

by Andy Holloway

There's a stereotypical image some city dwellers have of rural residents: Beer swilling, gun toting rebels who are masters of their own home and who settle disputes with fists rather than talk.

The reality is that violence in the home or on the street is a universal problem, but isolation and a lack of awareness can turn a violent domestic incident into a life-long nightmare.

Not knowing their full rights, some women remain trapped in sexually, physically or emotionally abusive environments fearing for their lives, but fearing the unknown as well.

This need not be the case. Most rural areas in Canada, including Hali-burton County, have support systems set up to help battered women put the pieces of their lives together. But it takes a phone call and the will to start the ball rolling says outreach counsellor Annegreth Gerrard of the Women's Safety Network.

Making that first contact can be very tough, says Gerrard, mainly because women do not know what their rights are and fear they may lose custody of their children, their possessions and their home. They become "prisoners of war in their homes."

"Sometimes it's not in a man's best interests to let a woman know the rules and they threaten the woman with the loss of kids or property," says Gerrard.

Dysart sewage expansion debate still unsolved

by Andy Holloway

Dysart might have the grant, but it is still a long way away from getting its sewage plant expanded.

The province gave Dysart a $2.42 million jobs Ontario grant last February. Since then the municipality has hired a consulting firm to look into the matter and held two public meetings, but is still unsure of how it should implement the treatment plant's expansion. The one thing councillors do agree on is that doing nothing is not an option.

"To do nothing kills the lake and kills the town," said Reeve Chris Hodgson. "If we lose the water quality in that lake we can say goodbye to tourism so to do nothing is unacceptable."

Consultants Conestoga-Rovers recommended that Dysart expand the treatment plant's capacity to 2,900 cubic metres which is about six times the present capacity. At the same time the amount of phosphorous being released would drop to 0.05 milligrams. To pay for the expansion property owners along Head, Grass and north Kashagawigamog Lakes would be forced to hook on to the system.

The total cost for the plan is $5.6 million with more money needed to build new sewer lines in the future - something neither council nor property owners can afford at this time. Deputy reeve Curry Bishop pointed out that the last time this was being discussed a lot of resorts opted out of the idea because they weren't being allowed to expand, only being forced to hook up to the system.

Bishop suggested a phase-in system with half the plant being built now, the rest later and the lines being built later as well. This would spread the cost of the project out.

Councillors said a capacity of 900 cubic metres would be good enough for the time being and that would still improve the quality of the lake's water. The Ministry of Energy and the Environment demands that any expansion of the plant must improve lake water quality.

"If we can demonstrate that we can reduce the amount of phosphorous at each stage we should be allowed to do it," said councillor Lloyd Leadbeater.

Council will try and set up a meeting with the MOEE minister this week to see what they will be allowed to do.

Norland firefighters receive donation

Many of the Norland firefighters and ladies' auxiliary members were on hand for an official cheque presentation Wednesday at the Norland Community Hall. Joyce Bowins, president of the Norland Ladies' Auxiliary to the firefighters presented a cheque in the amount of $10,659.84 to Norland Volunteer Firefighters' Association president Chris Batty. Reeve Doug Horton represented Laxton, Digby and Longford Council for the celebration.

The money was raised over the past four years at dances, bingos and dinners. It will be used to offset the cost of renovations, insulation, siding and furniture for the existing fire hall.

This cheque is a reflection of the hard work of the volunteers and the support of the Norland community.

Police planning safety blitz on commercial vehicles

Liquor heist

Minden OPP are investigating a break and enter at the Dorset liquor store which occurred between September 11 and 13. The persons responsible pried open the front doors of the store and stole a large quantity of liquor.

Outboard thefts

In the past few weeks several thefts of outboard motor gas tanks have been reported to Minden OPP. Boat owners in the county should be aware of the problem and take measures to prevent becoming a victim. Gas tanks should be locked with a chain and padlock, or removed and stored in a safe location.

Safety blitz

The OPP is planning a safety blitz geared at commercial motor vehicles between Tuesday and Thursday. The OPP will be targeting these vehicles and looking for any type of aggressive driving, improper and unsafe equipment or appropriate licensing. OPP from the Peterborough region in cooperation with the Ontario Trucking Association, Ministry of Transportation and our Dangerous Goods Officer will be targeting Highway 401 and Highway 7 during the blitz. The goal is to increase awareness of commercial vehicle safety by encouraging compliance of the rules of the road.

Don't Agree To Anything Until You've Seen The Used Vehicle Information Package.

Are you planning to buy or sell a used vehicle privately?

Starting on October 4, 1993, the requirements for private sales of used vehicles will change.**

Getting the answers to some important questions hasn't always been easy. How many previous owners were there? Are there any loans still outstanding against the vehicle?

These questions will now be answered in a Used Vehicle Information Package.

As of October 4, 1993, private sellers will be required to buy a Used Vehicle Information Package before offering a vehicle for sale. When potential buyers come to view the vehicle, the seller must hand them the information package to read. When the vehicle is sold, the seller must give the Used Vehicle Information Package to the buyer along with the vehicle documents.

When the new owner registers the vehicle at a Driver and Vehicle Licence Issuing Office, the Used Vehicle Information Package must be submitted with the other vehicle documents to complete the transaction. Otherwise, the transfer of registration will be refused.

If a private seller doesn't offer the Used Vehicle Information Package, buyers should ask to see the package before making any decision to buy the vehicle.

The Used Vehicle Information Package can be purchased for $20.00 from any Driver and Vehicle Licence Issuing Office or from the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations 24 hours a day by using a credit card and calling 1-800-267-8847 outside Toronto, or 325-8847 in Toronto. # Women, know your rights advises outreach counsellor

"The terror some women live under is astonishing."

That is what makes awareness about organizations like the Safety Network, which has been operating since April 1986 as an outreach office of the YWCA in Peterborough, even more important. There are two counsellors based in the Haliburton office and there is a 24 hour crisis line (1-800-461-7656) to help women recover. The network helps in many ways including crisis intervention, emotional support, advocacy programs and public education.

About 20 women a month phone the network. Some are just in need of 30 minutes of support over the phone says Gerrard, but other cases are more serious. In these situations the first question is always "How safe are you right now?" From that question can follow advice to call the police (which the counsellor will help with) or perhaps find a place to stay for the night and possibly longer. The counsellor can also direct them to other agencies which may be of help, like Kinark when children are involved, Parent Support Services, respite programs and lawyers (the network provides transportation to legal aid and a two hour free consultation).

"Just for a woman to know what her rights are is a big relief," says Gerrard.

Most of the women who phone (the network's number is 457-3355) are referred to the network by friends, family or in more extreme cases where a woman is forced to go to a hospital by her doctor or the police.

This type of word of mouth advertising is important because it can also help the network know what are the needs of the community. In 1994 the province is integrating two of its initiatives regarding violence against women, the Wife Assault and Sexual Assault Prevention Initiatives will be merged. As a result, the network is taking advantage of the opportunity to talk to women who have been subject to violence. Sheila Ziman, a YWCA facilitator says the network really wants to hear from the general public and service providers as well.

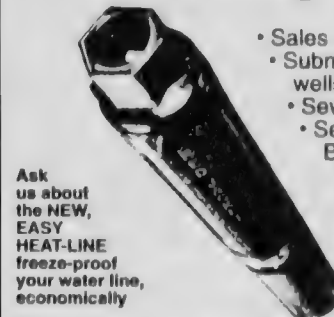

"The facilitator is there to coordinate and talk about the services in the community, what has worked well in the past and also any possible gaps that exist."

Both meetings are this Wednesday. In Haliburton the meeting will take place at St. George's Anglican Church between 9:30 and 11:30 a.m. In Minden a consultation will take place between 7 and 9 p.m. at St. Paul's Anglican Church.

One of the major problems in this county is the lack of affordable housing, especially if you are a single parent, says counsellor Gerrard. The YWCA is trying to raise money to build a shelter in the community to help alleviate the pressure and provide a place for women to stay until they can organize their lives. Currently, the nearest shelters are in Lindsay, Peterborough and Bracebridge which is a long way to go if the woman has a job or has children enrolled at a local school.

Chamber of Commerce president Rhonda Elstone and vice-president Brian Dean make the draw for the Diamonds in the Rough contest in August.

Rough diamonds

On August 21 the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce held their Diamonds in the Rough contest.

The contest was sponsored by Mercury Marine which supplied the grand prize of Quicksilver Inflatable Boat and motor which was won by Rita Garbedian of Paris, Ontario. The PineStone and Bell Cellular supplied the second and third prizes respectively.

The contest was the brain child of the chamber's marketing committee and artist Robert VanNood who created the poster. The poster helped people find businesses in the county and encouraged them to return.

Consultant's saving schemes disregarded by county council

ducing staff. Those recommendations, however, have all been dismissed by council.

Further, the report said savings of more than $1.5 million annually could be shaved if councillors were willing to abandon their turfs and unite the 10 municipalities in a single level of government.

This option was also quietly dismissed by council.

Although it is apparent that none of the recommendations for cost saving will be implemented, the report has forced council and department heads to take a close look at the way things are done. And while much of this report is destined for the landfill, department heads are clinging to a few of the recommendations.

McKnight, for example, is in favour of the idea of reinstating the Management Committee. This committee was disbanded by Warden Chris Hodgson, in an effort to bring council deliberations out into the open. Wace, however, said this committee helps councillors get an idea of what is going on in the county.

In regard to his new portfolio at Hyland Crest, McKnight agreed with many of the findings and recommendations cited by Wace. He noted that the morale problem is already improving and many of the recommendations deserve further consideration.

Morris Honeyman, head of Social Services, agreed with most of Wace's comments about his department. However, he did not agree with the recommendation to hire an investigator to clamp down on welfare fraud. Honeyman said his department's research indicates that suspected fraud is much lower than Wace suggests. He said the county would be better served by hiring an additional case worker rather than an investigator.

Economic Development Officer Mark Stagg's 58-page response to the Wace Report is almost as long as the report itself. Stagg was hired primarily as a planner, but this aspect of his job has been reduced to just five per cent of his duties. In a nutshell, Stagg says more money is needed for marketing; much more attention should be paid to planning, and one-tier government for the county deserves consideration.

Attack of the monster veggies

by Andy Holloway

There must be something in the Haliburton air because several people have reported vegetables and plants growing to ridiculous proportions.

Last Monday Kinmount resident Wally McMullen bent our ear (mind the pun) about his eight foot corn stalks. The tale was verified Tuesday and yes indeed, the stalks were eight feet high and the ears were already over a foot long and still growing. The frost the area experienced late last week may have killed the corn off, but if it didn't McMullen will have to use a step ladder to harvest his bounty. McMullen says he didn't do anything special with the seeds he bought in a packet, just planted and watched.

Diane and Perry Peacock from Lochlin stopped by later that day to show off their monster potatoes. The critters were huge, one could feed a family of four and still leave leftovers. The top tater weighed in at 3.5 pounds while the others were 2.5 and 2 pounds respectively.

Above: Diane Peacock and three monster potatoes, the largest of which weighs in at 3.5 pounds - enough for a whole family.

Right: Wally McMullen's corn from a packet is tipping the heights at eight feet.

Read insurance policy fine print

Here are some very important questions you should ask before purchasing travel health insurance coverage for outside Canada:

* Does the insurance cover your entire absence from Canada?

* What restrictions and limitations does your policy have?

* Does the policy exclude or limit coverage for people of a certain age?

* Does it pay for services provided in out-patient clinics or doctors' offices?

* Does the policy pay for a medical emergency trip home?

* Does the policy provide for cancellations, baggage loss and damage?

* What maximums, deductible or co-insurance apply?

* Do you pay up front and seek reimbursement or is the insurance company billed directly by the hospital?

* What documentation is needed when presenting a claim and what are the procedures?

* How long has the company been in business and what is its reputation?

Reading the fine print is the key to getting proper coverage and also keep in mind you only get what you pay for.

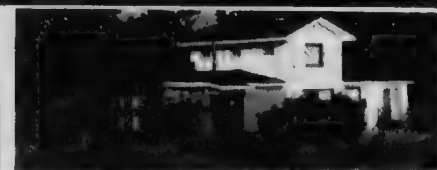

If you have a question that needs answering or require help with an application, contact your nearest Information Centre.

Stanhope firefighters kick off campaign

The Stanhope Firefighter's Association has announced the kick-off of a fund-raising project for a new rescue vehicle.

Firefighters aim to raise $50,000 for a rescue support vehicle and related equipment in order to alleviate the load on other vehicles.

"The trucks are very overloaded with equipment. We want to take the stress off the main truck and put it onto a support vehicle," said Chief Bob Nangle.

Stanhope council recently committed funds to refurbish the department's 20-year-old main pumper and to replace the leaky water tank on the tanker unit, a retired snowplow converted for fire use, says Nangle. Understandably, there's no money left for other areas, adds Nangle.

"Unit number three is in bad shape. Basically its failing apart and we want to replace it with something that will be useful across the board," says Nangle.

The new vehicle will carry the Jaws of Life and emergency first aid equipment as well as being a personnel carrier.

"We can only take so many guys on the trucks legally, so instead of taking their own cars to scenes, we can put more in the personnel carrier and know how much help we have when we arrive at the scene," says Nangle, adding that the vehicle will be a walk-in so men can change in it or warm up in cold weather.

Fifty-five per cent of the department's calls are for emergency first aid, including highway accidents where the Jaws of Life have been used successfully many times, says Nangle. The Jaws were purchased with $20,000 from a 1990 project, the only other equipment fund-raising campaign ever held by Stanhope.

"Council is doing the best it can, but with the constraints the township is under they can't give us any more money. We know what we have and what we need, so we're trying to do our part."

The decision to go ahead with the project follows the highly successful circus sponsored by the association in August. The $3,000 profit from the circus was voted toward the campaigned by association members a few weeks ago.

The firefighters are working on plans for public appearances and donation boxes around the area, as well as fund-raising events. Donations can also be dropped off at the Township Office or to any firefighter.

Some of the Stanhope firefighters help kick off a campaign to raise funds for new equipment.

Spiny water flea invades two Haliburton lakes

Another exotic species has been accidentally introduced into the waters of Haliburton County. The spiny water flea (Bythotrephis cederstroemi) has recently been found in South Kashagawigamog and Canning Lakes.

The spiny water flea, native to Great Britain and northern Europe, was first discovered in Lake Ontario in 1982, and had made its way throughout all the major basins in the Great Lakes by 1988. The spiny water flea is believed to have been introduced into the Great Lakes via the ballasts of an ocean going vessel, similar to the introduction of other exotic species like zebra mussels and ruffe.

The spread of this exotic species into inland lakes is believed to have occurred through anglers and/or boaters bait buckets, fishing equipment, live wells or bilges. Recent studies of inland lakes have located the spiny water flea in nine Muskoka lakes and now the two in Haliburton.

The spiny water flea is a large zooplankton, approximately 12 millimetres in length and is visible to the human eye. The head of the spiny water flea is entirely filled by a large black eye, and there is a long spine with three hooks from the body that account for more than half its length. It does not sting nor is it poisonous, therefore it poses no danger to humans.

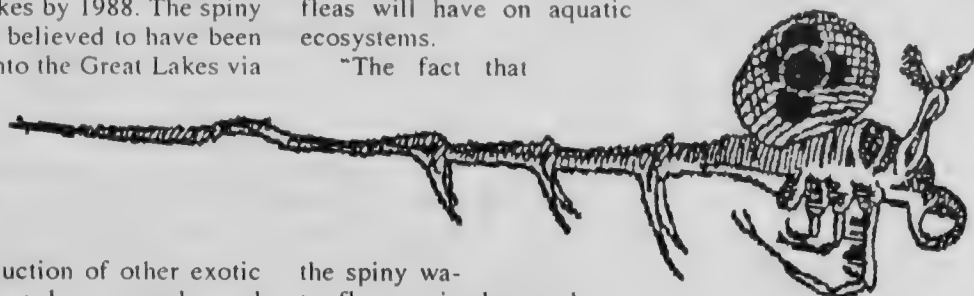

The main concern with the introduction of the spiny water flea is that it feeds on other zooplankton in the lake, the basis of the food chain in aquatic ecosystems. The problem arises because small plankton eating fish have trouble consuming the spiny water flea because of its spine, therefore both are in competition for the remaining zooplankton.

However, recent studies have indicated that larger zooplankton eating fish, such as lake trout or walleye, will feed on the spiny water flea and hopefully prevent it from becoming too abundant in the lake.

There is still much debate amongst scientists on the impact the introduction of spiny water fleas will have on aquatic ecosystems.

"The fact that the spiny water flea was inadvertently introduced into two local lakes is of concern," says Ministry of Natural Resources biologist Tim Haxton. "Although we believe that the presence of the spiny water flea will not cause any great ecological damage to South Kashagawigamog and Canning Lakes, it shows how susceptible the lakes in Haliburton area are to the introduction of exotic species, such as the zebra mussel, which could have a greater impact."

To help prevent the rapid spread of exotic species, extra caution should be taken when transporting a boat from one body of water to another. All boats, trailers, bilges, live wells and equipment used in the water should be checked for the presence of exotic species, cleaned and dried before use in another body of water.

Baitfish should not be transferred from one body of water to another, especially from a lake suspected or known to contain an exotic species. These precautionary measures are simple and should be routine to help slow down the further spread of exotic species.

Manipulating human code could pose ethical problems

In August, geneticists gathered in Birmingham, England, to describe revolutionary techniques to manipulate DNA, the genetic material. Thirty years ago, no one could have anticipated remarkable experiments that are now routine.

In 1961 when I graduated as a hotshot geneticist, a student asked me how soon the genetic code would be worked out. I puffed myself up and pronounced, "Well certainly not before I retire in 2001." Within four years, the entire dictionary of three letter DNA words had been deciphered! I prefer to think this reflects the incredible speed of technical and scientific innovation rather than the limitations in my knowledge.

Ever since life arose over three billion years ago, every new species evolved elaborate mechanisms to keep its genes from being mixed with those of other species.

Today, those biological boundaries are easily penetrated by imaginative methods to move genes from one species to any another: firefly genes inserted into tobacco plants cause them to glow when soil conditions change; goats or cows carrying human genes produce milk full of human proteins; and pigs are being engineered so their organs will seem to be human and will not be rejected when transplanted.

And now the sequence of all three billion chemical letters in the DNA of human chromosomes, could be determined in this century.

Geneticists are understandably exuberant over their discoveries and the potential medical, agricultural and economic benefits. But the power to exploit the blueprint that shapes the destiny of all living things, also raises the possibility of harmful consequences.

That's why several sessions in Birmingham were devoted to the moral and ethical responsibilities of scientists and ways to avoid deleterious effects of DNA technology.

However, the most troublesome problem was not addressed in detail — all consequences of innovations CANNOT be anticipated beforehand.

In the past, scientific discoveries that could be applied seldom generated serious consideration of the social, economic and ecological ramifications BEFORE the products were widely used. It was merely up to a person or company to develop it and push it through the required legislative and economic hoops to get it to market.

Even when public discussion has taken place before new products or techniques such as oral contraception and embryo transplants were made available, the benefits have always been overwhelmingly obvious and attractive, while all consequences weren't predicted.

Who could have expected that early motor vehicles or Henry Ford's mass-produced model A would lead to an industry that shapes our very culture, causes 50,000 deaths a year in North America, results in millions of hectares of land being paved and has altered the atmosphere through exhausts? Suppose when the atom was first split to release energy, politicians had called for broad practical purpose. Would the development of the atomic bomb have been approved? Probably, to end a prolonged, barbaric war.

by David Suzuki

Would we have acted to prevent the construction of hydrogen bombs, the escalation in nuclear arms, ICBMs, MIRVs, SDI or any of the other terrible armaments of the Cold War? No, because we didn't even know that these options were possible in 1939. And it was only years AFTER Hiroshima that we learned about radioactive fallout, buildup of radioisotopes in bones and teeth, electromagnetic pulses and nuclear winter.

In the 1970s, I interviewed Patrick Steptoe the physician who produced the first successful "test tube baby." He speculated about the possibility of wombs-for-rent and a market for embryos and whether a fertilized egg and had legal rights, which have all become contentious issues.

But we didn't anticipate many of the problems that did happen — legal suits over the fate of frozen embryos, AIDS infection from artificial fertilization, etc.

This is the historical context within which the genetic revolution must be assessed. Today, public concern is focused on the fate of genetically engineered food crops, especially tomatoes.

The biotechnology company, Calgene, has produced Flav'r Savr, a tomato strain that carries a gene to counteract the rotting process. The tomatoes are about to be marketed but an unprecedented movement called the Pure Food Campaign is pushing for a boycott of the tomato.

Scientists worry that more public input will open a Pandora's box. "If refrigerators had been debated before they were released, would people have turned them down to protect icemen?" I was asked. But the real dilemma is since we cannot predict all consequences of new technology, can we continue to opt for the obvious benefits? The public must have a big say in the discussion of this question.

Genealogy group has new info on file

Summer is the time for most genealogists to travel and further their research. Considering all the new information that was available at the May Ontario Genealogical Seminar the challenge was to use the many new paths. Kintracers is the new On-Line Bulletin Board sponsored by OGS. Any OGS member with a computer, a modem and a communications program may call at 300-14400 baud; telephone 416-932-9781 or voice 416-489-0734. It is very helpful when you hit a snag when searching databases, trade information, queries or to meet new friends.

The Archives of Ontario have now indexed births from 1869-1896, marriages 1873-1911, and deaths from 1869-1921. Filming of the remaining records is on schedule and will be completed in 1994. Because of the enormous volume of genealogical search requests and staff cutbacks, the archives is unable to process further requests, but they will acknowledge correspondence already received. This is a real blow to genealogists who were waiting for that elusive missing link in their "tree".

Now, genealogists must do as much research at the local level and through inter-library loans as possible before going to the National Library. A letter from your local library must state that you have exhausted local sources. It is wise to telephone ahead for restrictions that might apply. To minimize the impact of these changes, the local genealogy group is trying to increase our local resource material. Last year's Basket of Handmade Articles Raffle raised enough money to buy Indexes to Ontario Census Records - An Interim Update and Founding Families of Graton and Wilberforce (Ottawa area). We will be raffling another basket this fall in time for Christmas. Please support this small group as they try to make your family research easier to do locally. Our next meeting will be on September 29 at the Minden Library. New members are always welcome. Come and share your research ideas and goals.

Articles in Summer Times supplement were helpful. To those interested in founding families on Bobcaygeon Road, the information will soon be housed in our genealogy research section and available for your use. Several other branch newsletters are available too: Kawartha, Nipissing, Bruce/Grey, Toronto Tree, and Timberline from Upper Canada District.

An interesting piece of information in the Bruce and Grey May 1993 that quoted Brantches, Vol. 13, No. 1 Feb. 1993: Records of British regiments that served in Canada often show relationships of the men in the 17th century as having a male step-child referred to as a "son-in-law" and daughter as "daughter-in-law". A cousin could be referred to as almost any relative except a sibling or child. How confusing to a genealogist.

The Berczy settlers who came from Philadelphia in 1794 to Markham will be honoured in a 200th anniversary celebration next year. Anyone with connections to this group is encouraged to contact Lorne Smith at 10292 McCowan Road, RR #2, Markham, Ontario, L3P 3J3.

The above information was supplied by the Haliburton Genealogy Group.

Trent-Severn Waterway report

The Haliburton area lakes of the Trent-Severn Waterway declined only about 2 per cent the past week to reach 64.2 per cent by September 7. This is about 6.4 per cent more than normal for that date. This was, however, still 4.7 per cent less than the 1992 average storage level for this date when the wet weather was more intense.

In the dry year of 1987, to contrast the wet with the dry conditions, the stored water averaged only 38.2 per cent at this date. Considerable difficulties resulted around the shoreline of many lakes at the end of that dry summer.

As the evaporation rate declines with autumn, the river flow should rise without increase in the decline rate of the lakes. The lake evaporation generally peaks at about 150 millimetres per month in July and declines to zero by December.

Two times the piano fun with John Menzies

Saturday, September 4 Reverend and Mrs. John Burgess celebrated their 47th wedding anniversary. The ladies of the Peoples Church held a tea in the Trillium lounge in the couple's honour. We wish them much happiness in their future together.

John Menzies was present and played beautiful piano music during the tea and for a while after. Sincere thank you John.

Sunday Estella Burch came for reading. This was her last reading for six weeks. She is taking a trip to Wales and England, we wish you a happy time.

Chapel was conducted Sunday evening by Reverend Burgess with June Mason at the organ. Thank you John and June.

Since Monday was a holiday, John Menzies came in the afternoon and entertained us with more of his beautiful music. We truly thank him.

Tuesday morning chapel was held by Reverend Brian Parker. The residents sincerely thank him. In the evening Corinne Arsenault came to help us play a few games of euchre. Thanks Corinne.

Wednesday Doris took a bus load of residents to the Brown Owl for our noon lunch and to Kawartha Dairy for ice cream. We were assisted by Dottie Muirhead, Helen Donaldson, Pearl Cowen and Dori McAllister. Thank you very much for your help.

Senior League

The Kinmount ladies of the legion graciously provided our Thursday tea party. We had an enjoyable afternoon and thank Eileen Shepston, June Grozelle and Margaret Holly.

Ed and Billie Pickard entertained during the Happy Hour on Friday. They truly play stirring music and Ed almost makes the accordion talk. Bertha Hughes played the piano during intermission. Don Holden attended the bar while Eileen Holden, Pearl Cowen and Dottie Muirhead looked after the other needs. The residents appreciate and thank you all.

Birthdays in August included Mary Busby and Irene McKelvey on the 13th, Violet Thornett on the 16th, Vera Archer on the 25th and Nora Groves on the 28th. Happy birthday to each of you.

There will not be a Senior League column for the next two weeks.

Teams from Minden Legion Ladies Auxiliary went to Coboconk last week for Zone euchre games. The team of Mollie McKenzie, Ellen Holden, Mary Wilson and Edna Trumbull came in fifth and will go on to play in the District games in Whitby.

Members of Minden Women's Institute were disappointed when so few ladies turned up for the Branch anniversary and Tweedsmuir Tea at the Library/Cultural Centre on Saturday, September 12. Even the District President and Secretary took time to attend. The six "History of Minden" books are in great shape and now are available at Minden Library for the winter. Is your family history included and if not, why not?

Minden Women's Institute sends nearly 50 cards

Jean Lacey, president, welcomed the 16 members of Minden Women's Institute for their September 15 meeting at the Library/Cultural Centre. After the reports, we were told our Christmas Exhibit at the Fair had won and it also received a special prize from a judge. Irene Moore reported sending 49 cards for various occasions since mid-June. Thanks went to Irene for her excellent work on this job. Collections for the card fund and pennies for friendship were taken.

Maud Coulter read an account of the Standard Chemical Plant at Donald and ended her talk with an amusing incident.

Plans were made for the afternoon at Hyland Crest next month and for items for "Big Bucks" euchre games on October 6 at Burnt River. A delegate may arrange to attend the Area convention in late October.

The District director read her report on the district executive meeting. Her alternate Mary Wilson drove to the meeting and Jean Lacey was in attendance as well.

Members, please note our Auction Sale on your programme will go on the November 17 meeting.

The next meeting will be held at Staunworth Terrace on October 20 at 2 p.m. and all ladies are welcome to attend.

After adjournment, the draw was made for the grocery boxes and the lucky winner was Ken Watts of Minden holding ticket #145. Congratulations to him and thanks to all who participated either buying or selling.

Jeanne Sears, P.R.O.

IN MEMORIAM

JOHNSTON, Ellwood - In loving memory of my dear husband who passed away suddenly September 12, 1985. There is a home not made by hands, Beyond its golden door, Awaits the one who's now away, Not lost, just gone before. And in that home not made by hands The Master will prepare A place for us, and when He calls, We'll meet our loved ones there. Lovingly remembered by wife Ruby.

JOHNSTON, Ellwood - In memory of my father who passed away suddenly September 12, 1985. Within our store of memories He holds a place apart, For no one else can ever be More cherished in our hearts. We who love you sadly miss you As it dawns another year In our lonely hours of thinking Thoughts of you are ever near. Remembered forever and sadly missed, daughter Lynda and family.

In memory of a dear brother and friend
PERRY ALLAN KIMBLE
If our tears could build a stairway And the memories make a lane, We would walk a path to heaven And bring him home again. Our family chain has been broken And nothing is the same, But as God calls us home one by one, We know the chain will link again. In our hearts forever, with love, Shannon and Harold.

KIMBLE, Perry A. - passed away September 20, 1992. Remembered by his parents-in-law Ruth and Hal Morris.

IN MEMORIAM

KIMBLE, Perry A. - In loving memory of a dear father and husband who passed away September 20, 1992. Only time can heal our broken hearts And prayers for greater strength. Our world without you in it

IN MEMORIAM

Doesn't seem to make much sense When days are at their darkest And we feel we can't go on Your loving memory pushes us To face another dawn. Deeply loved and sadly missed, Kelly, Jamie Lee and Cody.
